People who want to manage their academic work successfully need to develop their skills in creating plans. You need to start your assignment work immediately because your deadline requires completion within three to four days. You need to divide your large tasks into smaller pieces and apply the Pomodoro technique to work for 30 minutes, followed by a 5 to 10-minute break. You must avoid taking extended breaks because they interrupt your work. The time blocking method serves as another available time management system.
